The Service Award recognizes outstanding contributions by an individual or group in the area of local history. In 1993, the Prince George Public Library Board added a Publication Award so authors could be recognized for producing an important new work of local history.

Non-fiction, biographies, historical fiction or any publication that improves the appreciation and understanding of local history is eligible for the Publication Award. Works must be published within the past two years.

The objective of the Jeanne Clarke Local History Award is to increase interest in local history, to publicize the library's role in preserving and promoting local history, and to recognize individuals and groups for their efforts in local history. Although the primary goal is to recognize the history of Prince George and the surrounding area, local history is broadly defined to include all of Northern B.C. so historical work with a regional focus is eligible for recognition.

Please do not hesitate to contact Ignacio Albarracin at ignacio@pgpl.ca if you have any questions.
